First Festival in the West Bottoms Brings on the Season's Spirits Haunted Houses Close for Season Nov. 5

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, November 3, 2016 — Kansas City's West Bottoms is known for conjuring up the best of the season's spirit with its six-block neighborhood of vintage and antique stores. The stores have a certain 'je ne sais quoi' style that ranges from vogue use of vintage and antiques to Southern charm and elegance to urban, trendy or offbeat presentations of Thanksgiving décor and one-of-a-kind gifts and furnishings. The season also harkens the final call for the area's haunted houses on Friday and Saturday night to those who want to test their courage and get their adrenaline fired up one last time.

The West Bottoms' First Festival is a 3-day event, attracting many shopping veterans who stand in lines before the shops open early in the morning to be among the first to pick-up unique 'finds' or those looking to get a jump on Christmas shopping and furnishings to make their home "holiday-ready".

The event is expected to draw 20-25 thousand people to the area for the three-day weekend.
